State Tax Commissioner Here

Hon. J. B. Eaton, a member of the State Tax Commission, was a visitor to this city during the week. Mr. Eaton's mission at this time was to gather data on which to base an equalization of taxes levied in the different counties. Formerly this equalization was arrived at from transcripts of the records but this is not satisfactory as is rare that considerations named in deeds represent the actual value of the property.

The Commission has hit upon another plan. Mr. Eaton met with a number of taxpayers at the court house yesterday afternoon and after discussing taxation for a time he asked those present to name a committee to pass upon the value of several pieces of property he had selected from the roll. H. M. Horton, Thos. Deegan, Geo. Fry, J. E. Loggan, J. P. Rector and Byron Terrill were selected. Each of these gentlemen marked the valuation of the several selections without consulting each other and Mr. Eaton took charge of all the figures. These will be compared with other data in arriving at a proper basis of equalization. Mr. Eaton left today for Grant county.

Indigestion and Constipation.

"About five years ago I began taking Chamberlain's Tablets after suffering from indigestion and constipation for years without finding anything to relieve me. Chamberlain's Tablets helped me at once and by using them for several weeks I was cured of the complaint," writes Mrs. Mary E. McMullen, Phelps, N. Y. For sale by all Dealers.

H. M. Horton and wife and party arrived home Monday night from Boise where they had been for the past week. Dr. Horton states the rains have been a source of great benefit throughout that territory and that all irrigation projects that have storage systems in that region have an abundance of water for the coming crop season. The rains have seriously interfered with cutting the first crop of alfalfa out that way but some of them were cutting it regardless of the moisture.

James F. Mahon was a business visitor during the week.

To School Voters.

The following extracts from the new school laws will be of interest to all school voters:

No special tax can be levied at any school meeting unless the call for such meeting shall contain an itemized budget showing the contemplated expenditures. A tax levied by a district of the third class may be reviewed and lowered by the district boundary board.

An itemized budget showing the contemplated expenditures shall be submitted to the county school superintendent.

The minutes of all school meetings shall be signed by the chairman and secretary.

It shall be the duty of the district clerk of any district, at least two weeks before a meeting for the purpose of levying tax to publish in one or more newspapers published in the district, a budget statement of the estimated amount of revenue required for the ensuing year for the maintenance of the school district, and in districts in which no newspaper is published the clerk shall post such budget on the door of the school house in said district at least ten days before such meeting.

It is the duty of the directors to make the itemized statement at a regular board meeting and deliver same to the district clerk. Under the new law no district can levy a special tax this year at the annual meeting unless the special notice is posted.

New school laws will be sent to boards as soon as they are received.

Dr. Saurman Writes on The Subject of Rabies

Not all subjects bitten by rabid animals develop the disease, due to some of the causes stated in the earlier part of this article. However, the virus of the rabies-snake, the viper, the cobra, give way in awe to the supremacy of the poison of rabies once the latter is successfully introduced into a subject, mortality (death) of these cases being 100 per cent. For this reason it has been a disease held in dread by the human race since a period antedating the Christian era. Prompt treatment is absolutely essential. The wounds should be cauterized with nitric acid and the patient immediately sent to the nearest location where Pasteur treatments are administered. The latter is the only treatment which we know. There is a small percentage, something like one-half of 1 per cent, who develop rabies even after the Pasteur treatment has been given. This in all probability, is due to the fact that patients present themselves too late in the incubation period or the injury has been of such severity or so close to large nerve trunks that the incubation period has been shortened. There is absolutely no truth in the assertion that this treatment itself will produce rabies—it gives no untoward effects whatsoever. Of the numerous cases treated in this state, not one untoward effect has been noted. Some of these cases date back as far as 1910 and have been kept under observation from time to time.

The best thing for a patient to do when bitten by a dog: The wound should be immediately cauterized with nitric acid and dressed aseptically. If the wound is deep, involving the periosteum or the eye, it should be washed with bichloride of mercury solution. As the organism causing the disease is probably a protozoan theoretically a saturated solution of quinine would be an ideal dressing. However, this is purely problematical. Do not depend on prochlorate or turpentine.

A few points of interest for cattlemen and farmers are: First, That as far as known rabies is not transmitted by the milk of cows. Second, That by the time an animal showed enough symptoms to have a diagnosis of rabies made it would be impossible to milk her and before this time the disease as far as known is impossible of transmission by the milk. Third, That it might be possible for an animal having a cut or scratch in its mouth to contract rabies from eating hay which had recently been slobbered over by a diseased animal, grazing over the same pasture is not likely to be a means of infection and practically all danger is eliminated if the sun has been shining on this ground for even a few hours.

Fourth, Cattle bitten by an animal known to have rabies should be killed immediately. If this is done there is no known reason why the cooked meat of the animal could not be used for food.

Fifth, Other animals bitten should either be killed at once or if very valuable they may be kept under close and safe watch until after the period of incubation. The latter it must be remembered extends over a long time. Only about one third of the animals bitten develop the disease. The safest plan is to kill all animals bitten by a rabid one. At present at Burns we are trying to prevent stock bitten from going "mad".

Sixth, Animals behaving suspiciously and where it is advisable to know whether or not they are suffering from rabies should not be killed if it is possible to pen them up under observation. If the disease is rabies they will grow steadily worse—never better—and will die within a few days—generally within 72 hours.

Wounds made by rabid animals should be immediately cauterized that is burnt out by some caustic such as nitric acid (this is the best agent to be used) tincture of iodine, or carbolic acid. This may be applied by wrapping the end of a small stick with cotton or tying a small piece of linen or cloth around the end of the stick, dipping in the liquid and then thoroughly rubbing in the wound. Do not touch the unbroken skin any more than possible. If none of these materials are at hand burn the wound out with a hot poker, the wiping stick of a gun or other iron. A physician should immediately be consulted.
